AN HONEST BOY

One day Boon was playing in the forest near his house. He was sitting in a tree and listening to the birds.

20485

Then he saw three men. They were walking quickly. One man was holding a big bag. The other men were carrying shovels.*

They stopped near a big rock. They were talking, but Boon could not hear them. He saw them pointing to the rock and talking quickly.

"What are they saying?" wondered* Boon. "Why* are they carrying shovels?"

"Now they are digging a hole next to the rock. Why are they doing that?"

The men did not smile. Their faces were angry and they were wearing guns.* One man was standing still.* He was looking left and right and behind them. He did not see Boon. The other men were digging quickly.

"They are putting down the shovels. Now they are taking the bag and putting it in the hole. Now they are covering the bag with dirt.* What is in that bag?"

Then the men finished. They pushed the big rock over the hole. Boon thought, "Why are they covering the hole with that rock? What are they trying to hide? Those men are not honest."

Boon watched the men. They threw their shovels into some bushes and began to run away.

"They are running to the road. Now they are getting into that big black car. They are driving away."

He looked at the number of the car.

Boon climbed down from the tree and ran home. He ran to his room and took a pencil and paper. He wrote the number of the car. "What are you writing, Boon?" asked his father. "Why were you running so quickly?"

Boon told his father the story. "They were not honest men," said his father. Then his father thought, "Hm-m-m-m. I am beginning to understand."

"I was listening to the radio an hour ago. A man was talking about three thieves. They robbed a scientist, a dentist and an actress. They stole a lot of money and took many things."

Boon and his father went to tell the police*. Two policemen went to the forest with Boon. Boon showed them the rock and told them the number of the car. Then Boon and his father went home.

The next day a policeman came to Boon's house. "Thank you, Boon," he said. "You helped us a lot. We caught those thieves. We returned the money and the things to the scientist, the dentist, and the actress."

"They were very glad. They gave this money to you. You are an honest boy and you helped us." Boon felt very proud.*
