"What grade* are you now at school?" Uncle Tim asked Mark one morning.

"Grade Nine, sir," answered Mark.

"Then this is your last year at school. What will you do after that?"

"I'll learn to be a dentist," said Mark.

His sister Tip laughed*. She said, "Do you want to see bad teeth all day, Mark? They smell bad too. People with beautiful good teeth don't usually* come and see a dentist."

"That's true," said Mark, "but there is only one dentist in our town. It is not enough. He has too much work. People have to* wait many days for him, and they get angry. They cannot eat and they cannot sleep. Their teeth hurt all the time."

"Yes, it is a good thing to be a dentist," said Uncle Tim. "He can make people well and happy again. He gets a lot of money, too. Our dentist works six days a week. He does not work on Sunday."

"Yes," said Tip. "I saw him at the tennis court last Sunday. He plays tennis very well. He played with a scientist that day. They both wore long white trousers and white shirts."

"And what will you be, Tip?" asked Uncle Tim.

"I want to be an actress," answered Tip. "An actress can be many people. I can be a waitress one day, a princess the next day. I'll have a lot of fun."

"But you can't be an actress, Tip," said Mark. "You are not beautiful. You can't even be a waitress. You always break cups and glasses. Go into the forest and the monkey will think you are his friend."

Tip was angry, and tried to hit Mark. He ran away, and she ran after him.

Mark laughed and said, "I know now. You can be a police woman!"
